

09/974,714 New Page, Submitted September 19, 2002

CLAIMS

I claim:

24. The combination of a dining patron preference profile, a dining event model associated with said dining patron preference profile selected from a plurality of said event models, and a customizable food service uniform worn by at least one food service employee which is configured to provide varying appearance responsive to said dining event model while still retaining a base outfit,

5 said dining event model responsive to each of said dining patron preference profile, a selected background, and a theme for said dining event;

10 said customizable food service uniform comprising:

C/ { 10 a top having a neck portion in an upper central part of said top, two arm passages oppositely located from each other on first and second edges of said top, front fasteners arranged along a vertical midline beneath said neck portion on a front of said top; a pocket adjacent said fasteners, and a back fastener on a back of said top opposite said front; and 15 attachments for fastening to said front fasteners and said back fastener responsive to said patron preference profile for simulating said varying appearance;

wherein said combination of dining event model associated with said dining patron preference profile and said customizable food service uniform worn by at least one food service employee interact to deliver a unique dining event.